National Qualification awarded to Head

The National Professional Qualification for Headship has been awarded to the Head at Fosse Bank School, Mrs Gillian Lovatt-Young. This achievement is the result of 18 months study, assessment and examination by the NPQH governing body.

At this present time, this is not a mandatory requirement for Head teachers and certainly not a pre-requisite in the private sector, but by 2009, all newly appointed heads will require this qualification.

Mrs Lovatt-Young says,

I am absolutely delighted to have achieved my NPQH and I do feel this is a vital part of my ongoing education. I also feel that this course of study was an important factor in being chosen as the new Head for Fosse Bank school, so I am pleased that I have achieved this level of qualification.

Richard Horne, Chairman of the Governors for Fosse Bank school, said

“Mrs Lovatt-Young has shown the children that we are all lifelong learners. We are confident that this attitude is a marvellous example to all the pupils at the school which continues to grow day by day with its pupil roll”.
