Pupils and parents from Fosse Bank School enjoyed a real sense of the great outdoors when they participated in a 'Camp-over' in the school grounds on Friday night.

Andrew Moss, a parent and the organiser of the event said, "Fosse Bank School has such a wonderful community spirit and we felt that it would be a great event, particularly for dads to share, if we set up camp in the beautiful school grounds for one night."

Head of Fosse Bank, Gillian Lovatt-Young said, "The children were very excited about the thought of sleeping on the football pitch and having a disco in the Sports Hall. The parents had just as much fun as the children, despite pitching their tents in the rain! The activity was a huge success and will definitely feature as an annual event from now on."
